Anza-Borrego Overland Run 2012

We will travel from the south end of the park to the north, exploring several trails in series. This will be an 'overland' or 'bobtail' run, with camping on the trail Saturday night. Bring your own food, water, and camping equipment.

What: I plan to camp overnight Friday night near Dos Cabezas (GPS N32° 44' 45.7" W116° 8' 23.3") to minimize early morning driving. We will leave from Ocotillo at 7:00 am on Saturday, April 21st. We will travel north on dirt tracks (and as little pavement as possible) past Dos Cabezas to Canyon Sin Nombre. From there, we will travel on the Canyon Sin Nombre trail, see the Carrizo Stage Station, and take Diablo Dropoff into Fish Creek Wash. We will see Sandstone Canyon, then travel down Fish Creek to camp near Split Mountain. On Sunday, we will exit out Split Mountain Road, then cross over Hwy 78 west of Ocotillo Wells, and continue north on the Arroyo Salado Trail, crossing through Borrego Mountain via Buttes Pass Rd. We will continue north to the Truckhaven Trail and to S-22. At that point, we will either select from other trails in the area if time permits, or head for home.

This run will offer some steep and rocky challenges, but will mostly be travel in sandy washes with spectacular desert scenery. Four wheel drive is required, as well as the required safety equipment as listed on our website, www.tds4x4.com. You may join us for either day if you wish. Please carry plenty of fuel, as the closest gas station to the trail is the Blue Inn, east of Ocotillo Wells. There is fuel near the trailhead, south of I-8.

Please RSVP to the Trail Boss above.
